How are you so sure what that angler was standing in was even a redd? It appears to me that is simply a cleared area from where he was shuffling his feet. If he didn't move for several hours than that is a bonus. He didn't disturb any other areas . . .

Yes, it is not good to wade this time of year, but it can be done if you watch where you are treading. You are obviously not too concerned or you would not even be out fishing for spawning fish, so there seems to be little concern on your part about disturbing them either. Just leave them alone for a month or so and go get some steelhead.

Not trying to be argumentative here. Just stating my opinion.
