They might charge $50 for a tip or mid section but I believe it's more for a butt section.

That does not appear to be the case:

Sage Warranty

"For all return shipments within the U.S., the original owner will be responsible for a $50 fee for each rod ($30 for each reel) repaired to cover the repair processing, return shipping and insurance. International customers will be charged actual shipping and insurance costs, and will be responsible for all related customs and duty charges."
