FOLKS.....to me this is one of the coolest posts and conversation i've ever seen on here. Alot of those things i already do but those are sometimes the best to read cause it reenforces your idea that you were doin it right , i also learned some things which happens every day on here and i've been doin this for over 50 years.....YOU FOLKS R GREAT.....My addition is this , in the early season , you know how a wooly bugger will sometimes float or ride high for a few casts till it gets wet? try laying it in a little patch of mud and lightly put your foot on it and press it in a little those first three or so casts have mud trailing from the fly and sometimes it's POW!!!!
