I hit MoCo Monday night hoping to find some fish with the storm front pushing in. Fished from 4 pm until 2 am. I knew it was going to be tough since the tides weren't in my favor and the wind was howling out of the SW. Needless to say i was right...

I did get a massive hit around 11 pm on a large SF blend mullet fly. That sucker took not only the fly but, my entire leader system. When I got the line back I found the welded loop failed... I tied on another leader system and another big SF fly. About a dozen casts later another hit, just not as big. I thought the hook was set but, it must have pulled as the fish got off.

That was it for the night. Going out again Friday morning.

Not many fish out there, some are being caught but, not many. I've read that schools are still being seen in the New England area so hopefully the big push just hasn't happened yet. I know the boats are doing really well about a mile off.
