I wonder if PSU is working with Franklin & Marshall College with regard to the landscape reconstruction. Good for PSU for finding this out, but this was already determined at F&M 6 years ago. I know this because I did the research when I was a student there. I found basically the same thing that they found. Marshy, wetland floodplains with lots and lots of alders. Hillsides had a lot of oaks and beech. My primary research area was in York County, PA. I am no longer involved in the research, but I thought that it should at least be known that F&M has been at this long before PSU.
