I have a Lamson Velocity 3.5 that I use on my Redington CPX 11'3" 7wt switch rod lined with 8/9 Beulah switch line and it is a bit tight on the spool with the line and backing and sink tips attached. I highly suggest the 4. I made the mistake of thinking the 3.5 would be fine, but it is not. Maybe if your shooting head is shorter and not as bulky as the Beulah line I have you might be fine, but it is better to go bigger than to be sorry like me.

BTW, the Redington CPX switch is a very nice rod. It casts beautifully.
