Alright I sent the letter via the TU site. Even after the P.C.E. article, I was opposed to the bill (if anything, on the grounds that state endangered species lists should not mirror the federal lists, that I believe states are more capable of managing our wildlife better than Washington, and the whole snake bit was ridiculous), but the issue of adding more oversight to the fish and game commission was a valid point, I believed. The WITF article was helpful, as is the fact that it seems the consensus on this bill by the entire outdoors community is against the bill.
