I usually tend to be in the middle. But ever since my trip to alaska, I have been super loyal to a certain reel, Lamson Konic. it has caught every fish that swam in Alaska (during my trip), and has been my go to reel ever since. you really cant beat the price, for $100 bucks you really cannot go wrong, and i prefer it over their higher priced reels or any other reel that is made.

Rods/waders on the other hand, i tend to be a bit more open. i fish with many different kinds. but even there i tend to let money dictate what rod/waders i will buy. i see no need to ever buy a rod over $400, there is simply no way that it will help me catch more or bigger fish all the time.
