Having it made a 'Heritage Stream' helped it I believe. Does it still have that designation?

Yes, it still has that designation although they are typically just called "fly fishing only catch and release" today. Slate has had some form of special regs since the Depression era and has been managed as FF only with C&R for most of its length since the 1950s. It's always been tough - even in the 1950s when the stream was still stocked anglers averaged less than a fish an hour.

I tend to get schooled pretty hard whenever I visit.
