Salmonoid,

There's a new Commando out, which is the one I got. Came out this summer. For the new version, it's the same name as the old, cept they added "4G LTE" to the end of the name.

It's still not gonna set the world on fire regarding internal specs. It was a little outdated when it came out, and that was 6 months ago. But Verizon's coverage map just makes it hard to leave, and this is the only truly rugged smartphone they have, really.

Processor: 1.5 Ghz dual core

Android: 4.0.4 (Ice Cream Sandwich)

Screen: Inimpressive specs for a modern smartphone, but looks fine to me.

Battery: Unimpressive, but I get 2 days of light use, or 1 day of heavy use. You can buy an upgraded battery directly from Casio, which I haven't.

Comes with it's share of Verizon bloatware, but the Casio apps are pretty cool (likely similar to the old commando, I'd assume).
