A request was made...I'm sure TU sees it as an opportunity to act responsibly WITHOUT some sort of forced regulation. I find that refreshing. Maybe they've already lobbied and found the fight fruitless and are trying another approach but requesting that this practice be stopped (agree with it or not) is much more tolerable than being told they have to...

Tom; I hope TU took this approach as opposed to lobbying for a ban. It's a step in the right direction but they could have shown even more creativity by encouraging manufacturers to make low cost non-felt wading boots available. Maybe even promote them with the TU label or offer TU memberships with purchase or as part of a membership promotion. If there were non-felt boots that worked as well as felt and had other advantages such as better wear they would go obsolete on their own.
