You may find this an interesting aside to the place. Where it is at you can drive 7 miles via snowmachine and park beside the Iditarod Trail every March and watch all the teams go by. It's not a big deal to see Jeff King or Lance Macky on the river training when the Great Race is right around the corner.

The part I don't like is that the Iron Dog Race runs the same trail. Iron Dog is a snowmachine race from Wasilla / Big Lake, to Nome and then to Fairbanks. When the race is on all the wannabe's come raising the devil out there in the bush. Snowmachines are a way of life here but when you build a place 77 miles off the road system and the grid you really don't want to wake up to the sound of them tearing through your woods.....

Yeah, I'm one of those guys who goes out there for quiet.
