Chaz, in all the stocked vs wild threads that have been on this board I have never seen you say a fish is wild.

The fin indicators go out the window on Thompson run because part of the stream practically is a concrete raceway. I've caught some browns and bows that were clearly wild fish with some minor fin damage. With that said, I can think of a couple larger rainbows I've caught there that did not look wild, they had a very dense spot pattern that is completely different from most of the rainbows there, along with bizarre split dorsal fins.
