

Subject: : Fly Fishing Locations

Topic: : Big Spring/Newville????

Re: Big Spring/Newville????

Author: : Fishidiot

Date: : 2013/12/3 13:34:24

URL:

As Jack pointed out, the "ditch" is the very uppermost (upstream) section of this stream and is about 150 yards in length and goes up to the spring source. The lower end of the ditch is obvious due to the presence of an old concrete mill dam. There is a PFBC parking lot right at that spot.

There are wild fish all down through the FF section - not just the ditch. There are, however, more brook trout in the ditch and immediately downstream. As you work further downstream there are more rainbows.

There is a ton of discussion on this forum if you want to learn about this stream. Use the Advanced Search button at the bottom of this page to read additional threads on this popular topic.