Two from Slab Cabin...personally, I firmly believe rainbows are reproducing throughout the system. Wild bows are fairly limited in upper Spring and middle/upper Slab Cabin, but common in Thompson run and lower slab cabin. Occasionally, one of these rainbows appears to be a hatchery escaped fish, but most are not. There are too many smaller rainbows for all of them to be seeded by a few escaped fish, and plenty of larger ones that look identical to the little ones. If you don't believe they are wild, that's fine. Mario and I will keep surveying the population 😊
