Access is really starting to get difficult on the donegal. It's very fragmented and a lot of the water that was open just a few years ago is now posted. Early last spring i was told by someone, presumably the landowner, along the long lane stretch you referred to that i could wade in the stream and fish but not step foot on the bank. I was wearing hip boots and it's not really the type of stream you can trudge through the middle of and expect to catch anything so i turned around.

If you happened to notice any tires or large refuse in the stream can you please pm me the general location? I'm planning on organizing a stream clean up sometime in the late winter/early spring.

Did you have any luck?...I might do a little trash recon this weekend, with a rod of course.
