

Subject: : Stream Reports

Topic: : Tulpehocken Creek Berks County 12-8-13

Re: Tulpehocken Creek Berks County 12-8-13

Author: : pcray1231

Date: : 2013/12/9 14:42:46

URL:

TCO stocks fingerling bows, I believe. At least, I know they were planning to. I haven't fished it since then so I haven't seen any.

They were supposed to start their fingerling program in October of 2012 but Hurricane Irene put an end to it. But they intended to go forth with it in October 2013, and were holding fundraisers, but I never saw the confirmation that they had indeed stocked them. The bow kind of confirmed to me that they did.

If it came from that it shoulda had the adipose fin clipped.

I'm more interested in where the tiger came from? The state only stocks adults. TCO I thought was only stocking bows. The brown could either be a smallish adult fall stockie or a wild fish from Cacoosing, which has plenty of wild browns. But the tiger? There are no brookies around that I know of, so likely not wild. Did it get mixed in with the rainbow fingerlings?