

Subject: : Stream Reports

Topic: : Tulpehocken Creek Berks County 12-8-13

Re: Tulpehocken Creek Berks County 12-8-13

Author: : jdaddy

Date: : 2013/12/11 14:44:41

URL:

Quote:

Mike wrote:

Sas,

Regarding the Tully, it never crossed my mind that you might intentionally be stirring the pot. Your comment was innocent enough, but by its nature and with the stream's past history I had to speak up quickly in order to keep that subject from reeling its ugly head again.

By the way, we have occasionally recovered a wild RT fingerling or two in that general stretch of the stream (Cacoosing Ck downstream to the Rt 222 bridge). Likewise for a few brown trout fins as well.

Mike

Hey Mike, have you ever thought about trying the RT fingerling program again in the Tully? LOL.

In all seriousness, and certainly not starting that conversation again, what was the average annual fingerling stocking back in the day. I thought it was like 6 kazillion billion, but recently overheard someone say "a few thousand". Wasn't it between 10,000 - 15,000?