this is one easy problem to solve IMO.

stock the streams that need to stocked. ones that get heavy pressure during the early season. mostly WW streams like wiss and pennypack. locals that have no real trout fishery after July. leave it at the 5 fish that it is.

you put special regs on streams that holdover fish well and have some wild population. streams like the tulp and little skuke. something like 2 fish a day after june. keep stocking them normally.

streams that have wild population you have a CnR. don't stock them and leave them be for anglers to catch take a picture and let them go.

take florida and most of the other southern states for example with redfish. it use to be a ok fishery back in the day. now its the best in the world. cause they managed it well. I am not trying to say the pa fish and game guys don't do a good job. I give them a lot of credit for providing many anglers my self included great fishing in our state. I think there are thing that need to be work out.
