Rather than dump tons of fish in marginal or spring only trout fisheries, wouldn't the fish be better used in cold water streams with a reduced harvest limit? Opening day is a circus almost to the level of the SR during the salmon run.

The state dumps them in...the meat heads run up and yank them out. Why not put an above ground swimming pool out for the fish eaters. Little "trout rodeo" like they have for the children. As the old saying goes, 10% of the fishermen catch 90% of the fish. In my experience, many of those guys take a limit, hide the fish and head right back to limit out again. I heard one tool bragging that he put 48 in the freezer on opening day. That's also the same tool that complains that the fish aren't in the creek like they use to be. Duh.

The real question is...."why isn't the river below Raystown being managed as a world class tailwater?".
