Keith,

I love the stream, but I would never fish it alone during the winter. It is one of the steepest brookies streams in PA, we're talking probably a 50% gradient from the mouth to the top of the mountain. That gradient means for every foot forward you go up a half foot.

Having said that people do go there to fish and hike during the winter, but take someone along so if something happens, you'll have help.

During the warm weather season it's difficult to fish at best because of the brush and gradient. That's why Becker says don't fish it during the winter.
