It's probably not cause for concern - perhaps they were cleaning the raceways and/or the weeds and algae have died back naturally due to seasonal fluctuation(?).

However, you may want to wait for Troutbert, Nymphingmaniac or some of the guys who keep a close tab on what's happening on the streams around there to chime in as they would know better than I what is normal and what isn't.

In the meantime, you might give the hatchery a polite courtesy call and carefully describe what you saw and when you saw it.
