Kray.... you gotta try these or something similar if you haven't already.

About four years ago I started thinking a lot about articulated streamers up at the Delaware. Around that time I finally reached a point where I could head up there and do reasonably well. That said, there were a few misses during that time that got my imagination going, leading me to articulated streamers.

Fast forward to last year, I hit my stride in tying them, got into using sinking lines, and this past year caught at least three or four 20 inchers up there, one at about 25, on articulated streamers exclusively.

I'm a believer, and I'm not even 100% convinced that we walked on the moon (Thanks Kubrick!).
