I have only fished SC once at Paradise so I am not familiar with the waters. Can someone wager a guess how it might be this Sunday with the rain forecasted tomorrow and the melting snow (if any)? I think they are calling for 0.5" - 0.75" of rain but I am not sure how much snow you guys have on the ground up there. I am just trying to decide if I should give SC a run or save my 2.5 hr drive and hit a CV spring creek. Or is Penns a better option, but I think there is more snow up in the mountains that could melt.... I am just not familiar enough with SC but from what I understand it does receive a good bit of stormwater input. I am aware of the snails and have my backup boots and waders ready. Thanks for any advice or suggestions.
