There is still a good amount of snow on the hills/ridges. Weather services calling for flood warnings tonight. You can check the gauge as others have suggested. It might be too stained Sunday and off color Monday. The ground is quite saturated right now from the last last snow melt and there are many pockets of frozen ice around waiting to melt. I fished yesterday and there is still ice around the banks and in the wet areas near the stream.

FYI: upper spring was just a tick above 40 degrees so the water temps recovered nicely from the deep freeze.
