

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Snitz Creek Microbrewery - Lebanon, PA

Re: Snitz Creek Microbrewery - Lebanon, PA

Author: : Swattie87

Date: : 2014/1/20 14:17:51

URL:

Quote:

troutpoop wrote:

On a related note. Has anyone fished Snitz?

Yes. The more freestone like headwaters holds Brookies and there's a few "native" Browns further down. The lower sections are ATW and get pounded...lots of tents near the bridges around opening day. There's quite a few sizable limestone springs that contribute to it, so I always think it should be a nicer stream than it is but such is the case with nearly all of the Lebanon Valley streams.

Squatch and I got kicked out of one such un-posted section once where a significant limestone spring enters it and almost doubles its flow. I almost let myself get drawn into a debate with the lady about posting her land if she didn't want folks fishing it, but in the end I should have asked permission first, despite it not being posted. It was below freezing that day, and the water coming in from the spring was 52 deg...

I'll definitely be trying the brewery since I'm so close, but I'll probably fish elsewhere.