
Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : Some Tying Questions to Get Me Started ...

Re: Some Tying Questions to Get Me Started ...

Author: : dc410

Date: : 2014/1/28 15:44:14

URL:

Quote:

Stagger_Lee wrote:

Seriously ... I think my eyes need to be checked but urgg.

You don't use one to thread? The lead was easy to get thru but this is causing me all sought's of trouble...

I just start the thread into the bobbin, get myself some slack and suck real quick on the other end. Yeah, I know this is going to open up a whole can of worms. 😊 Actually, I view this process as an aerobic exercise. It usually draws right through on the first or second try. Ceramic bobbins are even more challenging but I still own a lot of old style bobbins. Sometimes when you do this the thread gets wrapped around the side of the bobbin. If this happens don't unthread it, just pop the spool out of the bobbin and unwrap it. I honestly have never even threaded lead through a bobbin. I have always done all of my lead wrapping by hand. I am sort of old school on a lot of things, but it is what it is. Good luck with your tying!