Crawdad, I have fished for cudas and tarpon since I was 18 yrs. old.

I am now almost 55. So I have been doing it a while. Cudas and tarpon are 2-worlds apart. Both incredible fish. I have seen a 4' cuda hit a 10 lb bone fish and slice it in half faster than you can blink. I have also seen many huge tarpon eat a 2" long fly like it was going to be his last meal. Both very cool. Advantage to cudas in Winter is you don't need a guide. You can find plenty of them while wading.

There are plenty of wading spots in the Keys. I also agree cudas are not trash fish.
