

---

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : Smallmouth set up

Re: Smallmouth set up

Author: : afishinado

Date: : 2014/2/16 8:49:53

URL:

Quote:

poopdeck wrote:

Thanks for the information. I think I'm going to go with a 6wt. I never met a rod I couldn't cast. I never paid more then 150.00 bucks for a rod and usually I pay less then a hundo for one.

Running Cricket, I like to furl and fish thread based furled leaders. What's your thoughts on furled mono leaders. That's a tapered furled leader made on a jig not a hand twisted leader.

PD,

I make and fish hand twisted mono leaders. Actually, I will demonstrating how to make them at the newbie Jam on March 15th.

Anyway, I like the hand twisted leaders made from mono because they are supple and do not coil up. When you're talking furled leaders made with a jig and twisted thousands of times, I would stick to the thread furled leaders you now use. They are a lot less stiff than mono and certainly fluoro leaders made on a jig.