Yeah - DIY is travelling somewhere and hiring a rental car, booking a motel or camping and walking and wading using the Internet and local fly shops to find your own fish on a budget.

It's normally about half the cost of staying at a full service lodge with gourmet meals and wine, plus guides that most lodges or camps are geared towards now.

You're not going to catch as many fish but you can go more often - and where it's public water you're fishing the same waters as the lodge jockeys.

I'd rather eat burgers and pizza and do three trips a year.

At the moment I'm weighing up this versus the steelhead jam - I already have the 4 day spring jam and 9 day Ireland salmon trip on the calendar this year.
