

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : strike indicators

Re: strike indicators

Author: : bigjohn58

Date: : 2008/10/18 2:02:06

URL:

I use nothing but the ones with the toothpicks and prefer the ones with the slits in them just in case I accidentally tie on my nymphs before putting them on. If I can't adjust them up and down the line then I think they are junk. I am constantly adjusting the depth. I have them in like 3 or 4 different sizes in the hot pink and a few small ones in white which blends in nice with the foam but I can still pick it out. The white ones tend to be hard to find in stores. I use them probably 95% of the time when I'm nymphing and size of stream/river doesn't matter to me it all has to do with how high or low and how clear or muddy the water is.