1. I want to hear gobblers. I actually get up in the dark to drive along rural roads listening for them. (I'd be glad to see one outside my back door, but I live in town.)
2. Since I am not as observant as others, the first things I actually look for are coltsfoot flowers popping up in waste areas along back roads. (I think coltsfoot flowers are invasives, but I like to see them anyhow.)
3. Along streams, I look for blue-winged olives. Last year and the year before were the best I ever saw; this year, so far, I have not spotted even one BWO.
