agent229 - There is excellent fly fishing for trout in PA although not that close to the 'burgh. You said you'd be willing to drive up to four hours for weekend trips. In about two to three hours you can be on some of PA's best waters like the Little Juniata, Spring Creek and Penns Creek. Also, about a three hour drive will get you to the Cumberland Valley spring creeks like the Letort. Lot of history on these streams but they aren't easy to fish. I think in about four hours time you can also get into the North Central mountains which offer lots of fishing opportunities.

Also not from from Pittsburgh there's fishing in the Laurel Highlands and if you like a big brawling, often frustrating river there's the Youghiogheny.

You have warm water fishing opportunities nearby and are a couple hours away from Lake Erie and it's tributary streams which have steelhead in the fall and winter. Bottom line - lots of options but not right down the street from Pittsburgh.

Where are you thinking about grad school? My daughter is an undergrad at Pitt. She loves it there. Pittsburgh is a great city.
