cabelas ultralight wading boots: flexible but fragile?

looked at wading boots in cabelas, was struck by how light and flexible these boots are compared to others in the store:

inexpensive!.. I usually walk in to fish and recall fox and pcray wrote that these boots were light and comfortable but gave out. these ones let go at seams around rubber nose and sides:

so I will just buy em ... $60, what the heck if they last a third as long as $180 boots and are lighter and much more flexible? will wear them on longer walks but not tougher rocky wading. have beefier boots for that, but they are heavier and much less flexible.

anyone have these boots and if they let go was it a similar demise? am I buying a Yugo? :)
