I bought a set of Costa Del Mar for a good price at a Boater's World that was going out of business to see what a "quality" pair of optics would do. The biggest thing I noticed was that they reduce the glare from the sun hitting the inside of the lens ie. the sun at your side or back. A wave took them from me in the surf, so I purchased a set of L.L. Bean's (lifetime warranty) with copper lenses. These are my favorite so far. They seemed too bright on bright days but at the end of a day of full sun fishing I notice no eye strain. On overcast days they brighten things up. The copper color seems to me to be the best color for contrast and allows me to see the fish better. I took 4 pairs of glasses to the stream with me, grey, yellow, brown and copper and I could see the fish in the stream best with the copper lenses.
