

Subject: : Conservation

Topic: : A Lancaster County Brookie Stream

Re: A Lancaster County Brookie Stream

Author: : DGC

Date: : 2008/11/1 11:04:00

URL:

Not based on reading studies but just from my own experience over the years, in thermally marginal trout streams, which in PA and MD is quite a few unless you are in the mountains, the fallfish, creek chubs and river chubs do seem to make big comebacks in low water and/or warm water years. This year has been like that.

If looking for a silver lining to this, such a stream would be a great choice for a youngster to take a shot at fishing a dry fly, since all you have to do is flip it out and the chubs will attack.