

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Carrying you net

Re: Carrying you net

Author: : Foxgap239

Date: : 2014/4/4 15:53:29

URL:

Quote:

The_Sasquatch wrote:

Foxgap thanks for the Orvis tip. I'm just not in the habit of carrying a net. I bought one, lost it, bought one, lost it, finally bought one that I've had for about 2 years now, but most times it lays in the back of the Volvo. I just keep forgetting to strap it on! Taking pictures of fish is much easier w/ a net, I think. Gotta change my habits. Especially when I'm fishing streams that hold larger trout.

Andy, I have 2 nets, 1 for larger streams and 1 for brookie streams. The brookie stream net is more trouble than it is worth on small streams but I still like to have it in case I hook a monster (as I have once in the past) and won't miss getting a picture because I had no net to land him. 🤔

Buttcrack won't work for me as I never wear waist highs but your suggestion has merit, especially for those Philly plumber types. 🤔