Thank you for the responses everyone. I have just started doing some research and I have never been west of Ohio yet. I've fished up and down the east coast states, time to head west. The stop at west yellowstone will just be a base camp of sorts. the towns I'm looking at visiting are the following. Lander, Pinedale, Jackson in Wyoming then West Yellowstone, Bozeman, Livingston, Ennis Montana. I will be purchasing a annual license for both wyoming and montana so I figured between those 2 states I have plenty of water to fish. as for the tourist Im sure I will get annoyed with the traffic but I will be on the water to see the sun rise and not leaving the water till a couple hours past dark depending on the regs of the water I am on.

I'm stopping at some towns because of the history surrounding them in the fly fishing community. best part of driving, camping or hotels is that if I don't like the scene I just pack it up and go somewhere else. I figured a budget of $5k for the trip but hopefully return with at least 1k but if I don't its not a big deal.
