Agree with all posts so far. You just have to believe the fish are there. Read up on George Harvey and even Joe Humphreys Trout Tactics For some good nocturnal techniques. Leave your 5 weight in the truck and think 6-7-8 depending on size of streamers/ buggers used. Winter flows on larger rivers can be deceptively dangerous. Neoprene waders make a big difference too in 40 something temps. Read the water then break some rules too. Very often large browns will be in shallow tail outs or edges as dusk settles. Working "holes" is good practice but large browns don't always feed where you expect them to be. Solitude on a moonless night - good luck
