as well as RleeP's suggestion, i'd check out junction pools where a coldwater stream meets another or flows into a larger warmer stream.

usually there will be a deep hole or seam where big fish will sit and wait for bait to be flushed down to them.

given the relatively spartan food on offer on Eastern coldwater streams, i think the access to warmwater streams plethora of baitfish - shiners, chubs, suckers has to be attractive to big trout.

so spring, fall, winter and night time is where i'd hit those spots.
