The Delaware River probably produces the big trout on the most consistent basis, that being said it's out of you Geo area. I'd look for a stream that flows into a reservoir that has trout in it that migrate to streams in the fall. I'm not very familiar with much of the southern tier, other than brookie streams, but every time I find large brookies, that fish over 12 inches, it's in streams that flow into reservoirs and some of those brookies are 3 pounds, which would be in the 18 inch range for a brookie.
