the lower brandywine has signs posted about raw sewage. fish move.

plus, there are no end of insecticides and herbicides sprayed on farm crops and soil, which mostly gets washed into feeder creeks and then into the main stems.

even tiny amounts are carciogenic, so no you might not get food poisoning, but you might get pancreatic cancer years later - which is a modern disease, only found in the US in the 1940's.

personally, i'd only take fish above the farming belt.
