yeah, it was like that at jam time last year. Making matters worse was that the detour around had bridges out too, lol. Made what is normally a 20 minute drive from 7 mountains to Poe Paddy into an hour long adventure.

Still feel bad for gfen and crew. He didn't have a clue where he was going. So I gave him directions, before realizing the road issues. I think they had an adventure as well.

But yeah, the ANF roads are equivalent in quality to most of the roads around Poe. Exception being Poe Paddy Drive, which is significantly worse (don't take you're Altima up there!, it's the steep little rock path from that switchbacks up directly from the campground). Nice overlooks up there though, just approach it by taking Pine Swamp Rd from the Siglerville-Millheim Pike and don't challenge the hill itself.

ANF is the same deal where you have to sometimes travel a long ways on decent dirt roads as well. Not just short jaunts. It's how you travel distance.
