

Subject: : Fly Fishing Locations

Topic: : Intrepreting stream flow numbers

Re: Intrepreting stream flow numbers

Author: : pcray1231

Date: : 2014/4/29 11:10:27

URL:

Probably this website is your best bet. It's largely a "knowing" thing.

Knowing is important for understanding how wadable it is, etc. when high. As well as knowing that this stream fishes best when high, and this other one is ok to fish when low, etc.

Most of them do give "median" flow, though, which you can use as a baseline for "typical", and hence whether it's on the high or low side. The shape of the graph typically can tell you alot about water color, as well.