That's when you tie on your biggest streamer and start flinging it about wildly. Tell him you're sorry, it's your first time casting a fly rod. Works every time.

Was up on Kettle last weekend. There were literally hundreds of yards of open water downstream of me. When we first got to the hole, no one was there, despite it being a popular spot. Not long after, 3 spin guys came and fished not 10 yards downstream of me. Now, I was fishing a big bugger, casting clear across the creek, and letting it swing downstream. I thought, "Meh", I just kept doing it. These guys were clearly in my casting/swinging lane. When I'd strip my bugger in, it would go across all three of their lines. They still wouldn't move.

So I went downstream of them 50 feet or so and caught 3 haha!
