I can remember about 2 years ago fishing the sulphur hatch on the J. I was fishing a long, slow pool that required careful wading and soft casts. There was tons of fish rising, and I was just starting to get into a rhythm, and then i see a guy trudging through the pool right behind me, throwing huge wakes upstream, and he proceeded to wade right upstream of me(within 10 ft.), and started casting to several fish i was after. There was no fisherman as far as i could see upstream and down. I kept casting for a couple minutes, but he put all the fish down. I ended up just leaving and not saying anything.

It was all good though, i went further upstream and found more risers!
