

---

Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : Need help casting

Re: Need help casting

Author: : springer1

Date: : 2014/5/5 16:29:03

URL:

Quote:

I have a LL Bean quest 9' 5wt. It came with the backing and line already on it, so I'm not entirely sure if it's the correct weight line or not

Assuming that the reel has a Floating Weight Forward 5wt line on it (which it should), you would be able to learn as well as catch fish more easily on a medium action rod like this.

http://www.walmart.com/ip/Eagle-Claw- ... rlight-7-Fly-Rod/16767730

Some people on the forum will think this is heresy advise, however, others will confirm that this type of rod is not only easier to learn to cast with - but also easier to learn to fish with on creeks the size of many near you with without snagging every limb within sight with a 9 footer. It just depends on who reads the thread.