I wound up in the drink at Penn's twice on Thursday, and once on Wednesday. As in fully losing it, hands splayed out sideways, on my back.

I blame it on the worn-smooth felt soles of my Chotas. I'm roughening them up with low grit sandpaper for my next outing there.

The flow was a little bit strong. But mostly it was the slickness of the rocks. It's tough to try and regain footing once you slip. Especially scary when you end up crossing your feet, a definite no-no.
