

Subject: : Tips and Tricks

Topic: : Staying warm.

Re: Staying warm.

Author: : live2fish

Date: : 2008/11/21 20:06:45

URL:

Quote:

jayL wrote:

Quote:

live2fish wrote:

How about keeping your feet dry? No holes in the waders but my feet are soaked.

I would say your waders have a slow leak, or they just aren't waterproof. I never experience nearly that much condensation in my cheapie cabelas pair. The seams leaked like a sieve after a season or two, but I put that loon UV repair stuff on all of the seams, and they've kept me bone dry for four trips so far. I was stupid to trust them to keep me dry in the frigid salmon last weekend, but they did the job. I get some dampness, but I kept the wool socks on afterward, and they were dry in about 5 minutes... so it wasn't much.

That might be but wearing street shoes my feet sweat to the point where my socks are wet. I have two pairs of waders, one for summer that's lightweight and one for winter that's neoprene. My feet are wet in both.