I heard some good advice on another board... spray your feet with spray antipersperant... moisture just traps the cold. If your feet don't sweat, they'll be warmer. Plus you'll smell fresh after you get home and your wife won't complain about that nasty, BO/neoprene smell lol.

I forgot about that. I do that as well. Even when hunting. It really helps. Another thing I avoid is dressing too soon before leaving for either a hunting or fishing trip. The last thing you want to do is sweat before heading out into the cold. I always use layers and add them only when they are needed and almost everything I wear is ventable or has a zipper. Lately it's been cold enough you wouldn't think you'd sweat and I still find a way to do it. Zippers save me.
